

THE OPEN SOCIETY FOUNDATIONS AWARD GRANTS

The Open Society Foundations award grants, scholarships, and fellowships throughout the year. Start with the form at left to explore our published grant opportunities and view eligibility requirements and application guidelines.

In 2010, the Open Society Foundations, through its New York, Budapest, and London offices alone, awarded more than 4,500 grants in the amount of $612 million. Many Open Society Foundations programs engage proactively to identify organizations whose efforts closely correspond to our strategies. While we predominantly fund preselected organizations, some programs encourage submission of letters of inquiry or publish funding guidelines for grant seekers. Our scholarship and fellowship programs in particular actively solicit applications from individuals who satisfy the defined selection criteria. If you are interested in seeking a grant from the Open Society Foundations, we encourage you to explore this website to determine whether any of our programs or foundations correspond to the work you are pursuing. The Foundations do not award grants outside of our targeted thematic and geographic areas of interest.

Grant Tracker Grant Tracker, the Open Society Foundations' online grant management tool, allows grant recipients to: request a copy of a grant letter update contact, staff, and payment information check the status of grant payments submit and monitor grant reports receive email notifications on reports and payments disbursed Request an Account If you have not received account login information but are affiliated with an Open Society Foundation grant, you may request an account. You will be prompted for a valid email address (a shared address is not permitted) as well as the grant ID included in your grant award letter. Please allow up to five business days for us to activate your account. Help If you are having trouble accessing Grant Tracker or have not received a response to your request for a new account within five business days, please send an email to grants@sorosny.org.